AUGER GROUPE CONSEIL INC.
Génie industriel / Industrial engineering

Auger Groupe Conseil ends its exercise for strategic planning.

For years, AGC prepares its strategic planning on an annual basis. This year AGC has joined up with the services of a specialist in the field and has come up with a strategic development plan that will meet his high expectations. « Our customers regularly confirm their satisfaction regarding the realizations of our group and our rate of repetition at our customers is very high. Our customers associate themselves with us, as a partner in industrial engineering and desire that we assume an important role in their firms in this capacity », states Raymond Auger president of our group.

Starting with this declaration, one of the axis of intervention for our firm is to invest in this customer desire and to develop a type of partnership that leads us to assume a sort of support for industrial engineering, more constant for our customers and this in a Canadian perspective.

In fact, for the past few years AGC has put together an Anglophone team that presently is working in the Atlantic provinces, notably in New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Newfoundland. Another team will be activated to penetrate Ontario and the other provinces during the coming year. This strategic target for development aims at making AGC a Canadian firm, and is based on the capacity of AGC to answer to the demands of its Anglophone customers and their affiliates.

Another strategic target is to maintain constant communications with our customers in order to harmonize the development of products and services to the needs of our customers.

Since the beginning, AGC has stayed away from passing trends, in order to concentrate on the heart of what is industrial engineering. In industrial engineering itself, there exists very efficient tools and techniques which are relatively unknown. A team of experts have given themselves the mandate of demystifying these tools and techniques, to make them known to our customers.

This exercise turned out to be very stimulating for our team at AGC that was implicated in the totality of the tune up for this strategic plan.
